Early Beginnings and Guiding Mariners

The Huntington Harbor Lighthouse was first established in 1857, its beacon guiding ships into the bustling harbor. The original lighthouse, a wooden structure, was replaced in 1895 by the current brick tower, which stands 48 feet tall and emits a powerful beam of light visible for miles.

Keepers of the Light

The lighthouse keepers, dedicated individuals who braved harsh weather conditions to maintain the light and ensure the safety of mariners.

Throughout its history, the Huntington Harbor Lighthouse was manned by dedicated keepers who resided in the adjacent keeper's house. These individuals faced the challenges of isolation, storms, and the responsibility of maintaining the lighthouse's vital beacon.

A Changing Landscape and Modernization

As technology advanced, the role of the Huntington Harbor Lighthouse gradually shifted. In 1933, it was automated, eliminating the need for keepers. Today, the lighthouse stands as a reminder of its past while continuing to serve as a navigational aid for boaters.
