The Team

Mendia Biluzia, a Basque mountaineering club, handpicked a formidable team for this unprecedented mission. Led by the veteran climber Alex Txikon, the team comprised skilled mountaineers Ines Papert and Ali

Sadpara, seasoned high-altitude porter Pasang Nuru Sherpa, and the promising young alpinist Jonatan García. Each member brought a unique blend of expertise and unwavering determination to the expedition.

The Challenge

Winter ascents of Nanga Parbat are exceptionally demanding due to extreme cold, unpredictable snowfall, high winds, and avalanches. The team knew they were venturing into uncharted territory, with no margin for error. They meticulously planned their route, carefully considering the technical difficulties and the unpredictable nature of the mountain in its frozen state.

The Climb

On January 22, 2021, the team set off from the base camp, embarking on their arduous journey. They opted for the challenging Diamir Face, a route known for its steep ice walls and unpredictable weather patterns. The climbers ascended steadily, establishing camps along the way. Each day brought new challenges and tested their endurance and determination.

Conquering the Summit

After weeks of relentless climbing, the team reached the summit of Nanga Parbat on February 26, 2021. The conditions were unforgiving, with temperatures plummeting below minus 30 degrees Celsius and strong winds swirling around them. Yet, the climbers' unwavering spirits propelled them forward. They had achieved a remarkable feat: the first winter ascent of Nanga Parbat.

The Impact

Mendia Biluzia's historic achievement has left an indelible mark on the world of mountaineering. Their ascent showcased exceptional skill, courage, and the relentless pursuit of human limits. It sparked widespread admiration and inspired future generations of climbers. The expedition also highlighted the Basque Country's rich tradition of mountaineering and its unwavering commitment to pushing boundaries in the realm of adventure.

The extraordinary winter ascent of Nanga Parbat by Mendia Biluzia stands as a testament to the indomitable spirit of human endeavor. By conquering one of the most formidable peaks in the world under extreme conditions, the Basque climbers have etched their names in the annals of mountaineering history. Their unwavering determination, meticulous planning, and exceptional teamwork serve as an inspiration to all who dare to dream big and strive for the extraordinary.
