The book is divided into three parts. The first part, "Sharks," chronicles Saujani's experiences with sexism and racism. She writes about being passed over for promotions, being told that she is not qualified for certain jobs, and being harassed by male colleagues. The second part, "Storms," chronicles Saujani's experiences with adversity. She writes about losing her father to cancer, being diagnosed with breast cancer, and running for Congress and losing. The third part, "Sisterhood," chronicles Saujani's experiences with the power of sisterhood. She writes about the importance of having a support network of other women who can provide you with encouragement and support. She also writes about the importance of giving back to other women and helping them to achieve their goals.

Resurfacing is a powerful and inspiring memoir that will resonate with anyone who has ever faced adversity. Saujani's story is a reminder that we are all capable of overcoming challenges and achieving our dreams. It is also a reminder of the importance of sisterhood and the power of supporting other women.

Quotes from Resurfacing

- "I am a woman of color. I am a lawyer. I am a politician. I am a founder. I am a survivor. I am Reshma Saujani."
- "I have been called a shark. I have been called a storm. But I am not afraid to be who I am."
- "Sisterhood is not about being perfect. It is about being there for each other, even when we disagree."
- "We need to support each other and lift each other up. We need to create a world where all women can succeed."
