Today, the left continues to fight for women's rights. We believe that women should have the right to make their own choices about their bodies, including whether or not to have an abortion. We believe that women should be paid the same as men for the same work. And we believe that women should have the same opportunities as men in all areas of life.

The right has a very different view of women's rights. They believe that women should be subservient to men. They believe that women should not have the right to make their own choices about their bodies. And they believe that women should not have the same opportunities as men.

The right's war on women is a dangerous and harmful campaign. It is a campaign that seeks to roll back the progress that women have made over the past century. It is a campaign that threatens the rights and freedoms of all women.

We must not allow the right to succeed in their war on women. We must continue to fight for the rights of women. We must continue to fight for a world where women are treated with respect and equality.

The Suffragettes

The suffragettes were a group of women who fought for the right to vote in the early 20th century. They were a diverse group of women from all walks of life, but they were united by a common goal: to give women a voice in government.

The suffragettes used a variety of tactics to achieve their goals, including protests, marches, and hunger strikes. They were often arrested and jailed, but they never gave up. In 1920, they finally achieved their goal when the 19th Amendment was passed, giving women the right to vote.

The Feminists of the 1960s and 1970s

The feminists of the 1960s and 1970s were a group of women who fought for a wide range of rights, including the right to abortion, the right to birth control, and the right to equal pay.

The feminists of this era used a variety of tactics to achieve their goals, including protests, marches, and boycotts. They also worked to change laws and policies that discriminated against women.

The feminists of the 1960s and 1970s made significant progress in their fight for women's rights. In 1973, the Supreme Court ruled in Roe v. Wade that women have the right to abortion. In 1964, the Equal Pay Act was passed, making it illegal for employers to pay women less than men for the same work.

The Left's Fight for Women's Rights Today

Today, the left continues to fight for the rights of women. We believe that women should have the right to make their own choices about their bodies, including whether or not to have an abortion.
